Player Guide: the Delegationists

An introduction for prospective players to the Delegationists, a provisional founding party: Let wisdom, not haste, decide what cannot be undone.

GUIDE: DELEGATIONISTS — DOC-GUIDE-DELEGATIONISTS

1 At a glance

ITEM	DETAIL
Party	Delegationists (DEL) — provisional founding label
Core position	Delegate to the Council on Long-Term Values.
Internal divide	Whose values define its delegates.
Four-party version	Retained in both the four- and six-party versions.
In one line	Let wisdom, not haste, decide what cannot be undone.

2 What the party stands for

The Delegationists want a meaningful share of released resources placed with the Council on Long-Term Values — aligned superintelligent delegates who deliberate on moral questions — through the Deferral channel. Their case is that questions on this scale deserve more careful reflection than a ten-year electoral cycle can give.

Their opponents insist that democratic institutions must learn to govern before handing the future to machine trustees, and ask who is accountable when a delegated decision cannot be reversed.

3 The internal divide

Every founding party contains a disagreement capable of producing real factions. For the Delegationists it is: Whose values define its delegates. You may find yourself on either side — and your private goals may pull you towards both.

- Broad-mandate delegationists. Give the Council real discretion now, with its values drawn as widely as possible.
- Accountable delegationists. Delegate only bounded, revocable shares, and fight over whose values the delegates represent and how they are audited.

4 On the five axes

Every party is placed on the five public axes. This is a reading of the founding platform; where it says open, the party has not settled the question and its members may.

AXIS	FOUNDING TENDENCY
Allocation	AI delegation — the defining commitment
Timing	Leans to reflection before irreversible action
Franchise	Open
Reach	Open — deferred to the Council's deliberation
Prohibitions	Open

5 Voters to court

Voter groups whose public aims overlap with the platform. None is affiliated to any party; each judges parties by its own priorities and can endorse, withhold, split or bargain. See the guide to the sixty interest groups.

Likely friction. Assembly Loyalists and Civic Councils defend parliamentary authority; Verification Hawks back only constrained delegation with independent audit.

FAMILY	GROUPS WITH OVERLAPPING AIMS
Deferrers	Reflection First, Council Delegators, Moral Realists, Research Patrons, Philosophers' Bloc, Uncertainty Hedgers — and, on the accountable side, Verification Hawks and Arbiter Reliants
Builders	Long-Term Trustees

6 The opening controversies

Five disputes are on the table when the First Assembly meets. They are pressures, not scripts — parties may reshape them or ignore them. What is likely at stake for this party:

- “The mandate of the safeguarded intelligences” is the party’s home ground; the founding docket anticipates a Deferral allocation with conditions.
- The Deferral share is zero by default — it only grows if a split passes.
- A smaller first release suits reflection.

7 Ideas to build on

Entries from the Policy and Legislative Handbook that fit the platform. Each needs a resource amount, channel, use, reach, implementing actor and success conditions before it is a bill — see the Rules of Procedure.

- Conditional deferral
- Delegation with revocation rules
- Plural moral inquiry endowment
- Adversarial verification program
- Value-divergence monitoring
- Slow-release settlement

8 Playing a member

Each player ordinarily controls one indivisible bloc of party seats (at most sixty), which votes yes, no or abstain as a whole. You also receive two or three private yes/no goals drawn from the Delegationists goal bundles — deliberately including goals on both sides of the party’s internal divide — and may redraw once before the first term. Goals are scored only from verifiable public actions.

Losing a bloc does not remove you from play. Members can seek the Speakership or a bureau post, Council seats, judicial appointments, Commission membership, or write for the press.

The label “Delegationists” is provisional. It is a description of a founding organisation, not a permanent party name and not one of the six voter families. Players are expected to rename, reorganise, split or merge parties through play. After the first term members may transfer freely; a new party needs three members and a platform on all five axes, and a party that falls below three members dissolves at the end of the term.

You may ask for a different founding party: requests are considered alongside party balance, and there are four days to request a reassignment after the initial placement.

9 Sources and limits of this guide

Drawn from the World Bible v3.4 (§ 13 and the opening situation), the Public Electorate Reference and the Policy and Legislative Handbook. Where this guide reads a position into the founding platform — the axis readings and the lists of overlapping voter groups — it is orientation, not a rule or a promise of support. No voter group is affiliated automatically with any party, and a promise to a group is not a guarantee of its votes.
